

Alaska

By Tosh Brown

A rainbow over the tidal flats

The rugged splendor of the Alaska Peninsula

Yard décor at the Alaska Wilderness Safari camp

A silver salmon thrashes through the shallows during the spawning run.

Mike Siegman hooks up with an Arctic char on a perfect Alaska morning.

Resident carnivore—in many parts of Alaska, bears and anglers share the same waters.

A chrome-bright silver salmon does the “leader roll” near the end of the battle.

Anglers hike around an inlet at high tide.

Fly-in anglers take a break from fishing to warm up by the fire and enjoy lunch on a crisp fall day.

Tosh Brown, www.toshbrown.com, is a professional photographer who lives in Austin, Texas.

Party favors? Nope, salmon flies—silvers like bright colors.

Lead, flash, and bulk—for Alaska silvers, big, bright flies and beefy tippets are in order.

South of King Salmon, the view from above shows the rugged beauty of the coastline.